

Some Practical Design Elements and Considerations

Yang-Hsueh Chen

Let's see this example...

The screenshot shows a software interface with a green sidebar on the left and a main content area. The sidebar contains a navigation menu with the following items: Exit (with a photo of a couple), Teacher's Guide, Introduction, Content Overview, Operational tips, Instructional Guide, Resources, Evaluation, Contact Us, and Certificate. The main content area has a light orange background. At the top, a flowchart shows 'Unit 1 Getting to know me' leading to 'Lesson 1 Me, myself and I', which then leads to a yellow box labeled 'Activity 1. All about me'. Below this, a red text box states: 'In this activity, students will find out about their strengths and weaknesses by taking a self test.' In the center, there is a self-test form titled 'You are Unique!!'. The form lists four statements with radio button options: 1. 'I realize that I have choices in most situations.' (Always, Often, Sometimes, Never), 2. 'I am confident about my decisions.' (Always, Often, Sometimes, Never), 3. 'I have a lot of respect for myself.' (Always, Often, Sometimes, Never), and 4. 'I have some qualities that are unique and special.' (Absolutely, Not Sure). Below the form, there is a quote by Dineh Mohajer: 'You have to know what you're good at and what you're bad at.' At the bottom of the interface, there is a 'Back' button with a yellow arrow, a 'NEXT' button with a green oval and '>>>>>' text, and a page indicator 'Page 4 of 19'.

Web design is an art. Great web design occurs when design and content are seamless and you don't notice its greatness. With great web design, it's easy to find the information you need. The content makes you want to return again and again and, most importantly, great design gives credibility to the company/organization.

2008 was a good year for bad web design

Like every year since 1996, I hoped that this year would be the year when we'd only have 10-15 sites that were truly awful. Dream on. I suspect I had 130+ candidates for the top ten. I haven't

About this CD

Welcome to TAPP!

All teens, including those with disabilities, are at risk for becoming pregnant. Information concerning pregnancy prevention is available, however, there is a lack of teaching materials that specifically address the learning needs of students with disabilities. In view of this, we develop this interactive CD-ROM as an instructional tool for teaching students learn more about self-esteem and pregnancy prevention.

Initial development of the CD-ROM was funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Education, Steppingstones of Technology Innovation for Students with Disabilities (H327A010048), A Technological Approach to Pregnancy Prevention (TAPP).
